

BIZBASH

NEW YORK

EVENT REPORT 08.22.08 3:04 PM

California Culture

Fashion trade show Class took to Santa Monica for its second outing, adding more eco-friendly elements and beach-culture touches like surf lessons.

FROM LOS ANGELES

After its debut in March of this year, fashion trade show Class returned to the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium August 19 and 20 for its second eco-friendly show. Creator Jason Bates added a host of new elements focused on environmental friendliness and Southern California culture and worked with event producer Matt Wise to make it happen.

"Class was created as a reaction to the dullness and overwhelming lack of inspiration that exists at other industry trade shows," Bates said. "Vegas has become an overwhelming corporate behemoth that, while important, lacks the creative newness, stimulation, and edginess of a true fashion leader. I feel that it is time to bring it all home to California, where it all began."

Calling attention to the new fashion trade show's Southern California locale, organizers added elements meant to evoke laid-back local culture, such as surfing lessons for participants, art installations on display from local artists, and foosball and Ping-Pong tables in the patio area.

Following suit from its debut show, Class concentrated on green initiatives. "The fashion industry is accountable for over 50 percent of pollution in the water due to textiles, so we're just trying to do our part," said Wise. Eco-conscious touches included Green Power Generators, recycled signage, recycled-aluminum racks, and earth-friendly water service I Love My H2O stations throughout the venue. All programs—including a bowling mixer—were within walking distance of hotels, and organizers worked with True Offset, an organization devoted to planting carbon-offset trees in Hawaii. "We attract brands that are eco-friendly and organic; there is growth in that region because it's becoming more trend driven," added Bates.

The show has increased its participating retailers, adding more women's and accessory brands, plus a perfumery. Class increased participation by about 30 percent for this show, and organizers plan to maintain that growth rate.

—Shilpa Gopinath

DJ Baron spun for attendees during the show.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

Guests attended a bowling mixer on Tuesday night.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

The eco-friendly event took over the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

Bicycles powered blenders that made specialty drinks.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

The show featured art installations on display.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

Attendees assembled in the registration area.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

In its second show, Class brought its first perfume exhibitor.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

A custom rug exhibitor was a new addition at this year's show.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

An art exhibit decked the lounge area.

Photo: Courtesy of Class Trade Show

CLASS TRADE SHOW

- Catering Lemonade
- Catering Jackson Catering
- DJ DJ Baron
- Gift Bags Pearl Package
- Lighting Lighter Side
- Power Green Power Generators
- PR Alex Dickerson
- Printing Mighty Printing
- Production Class Events
- Production Wise Production Group
- Rentals Town & Country Event Rentals
- Venue Santa Monica Civic Auditorium

RELATED TOPICS Going Green, Class Trade Show